GUIDELINES FOR PARTICIPANTS AND PRESENTER

Conference Etiquette

Mobile phones and other portable devices should be switched to 'silent' or turned off during sessions. We invite you to respect speakers and other delegates and refrain from talking during presentations.

Guidelines for Paper Presenters

Presenters are requested to check the final programme on the app (and in the printed brochure) for their exact room number and presentation time frame. Presenters are asked to be in the room in which they are presenting at least ten minutes before the session starts so that they can meet the chair of the session and upload their presentation before the session starts.

Chairs will remind presenters of their timings before the session starts. All presenters will have 15 minutes for their presentation. We strongly advise you to follow the structure of your paper by including the introduction, methodology, results, conclusions, and references. There will then be further 5 minutes for discussion with the session chair, participants, and attendees.

Presentations must be in PowerPoint (PC/Mac) format. All computers run Windows 10 and Office 2016 formats. If you have any challenges (technical or other types), volunteers will be available in all meeting rooms.

Presenters are not required to bring their own laptop as all presentations are to be uploaded to the main session room computer. It is recommended that you bring your presentation on a USB memory stick and, if possible, a backup USB version in case a file is corrupted.

NOTE: If your presentation includes movie clips, you must bring the original movie files as well as the PowerPoint file, otherwise your movie clips may not run.

Timekeeping

The programme contains a large number of presentations, so it is essential for each session to start and finish on time. Please make sure that you keep your allotted presentation time, otherwise the Chair will ask you to conclude.

Guidelines for Poster Presenters

There will be a special poster viewing session on Thursday, 30th of May 2024, from 17:30 to 19:00 on the 3rd and 4th floor hallway. During this session, all poster presenters are requested to be present next to their poster to answer delegate questions.

Poster set-up time

Thursday from 12.00

Poster removal time

Before Thursday at 19.30 (right after the poster session)

The organisers cannot be held responsible for any posters left after this time.

Guidelines for Preparing a Poster Presentation

Presenters will interact with attendees while standing next to their Poster Presentation. Attendees at Poster Presentations will stroll by looking for topics of interest. Presenters need to attract attention with a good topic and a visually interesting presentation. Organization and clarity are critical. A poster presentation should attract people's interest as they walk by and then be easily reviewed to stimulate a one-to-one discussion with the presenters. The goal is to encourage informed discussion about your research. The poster should be easily readable from 1.5 meters (4 feet) away. One or more of the authors must be present during the session. If one author represents a team who wrote the paper, that person should be capable of responding to questions concerning all aspects of the presentation.

Support:

Although we will provide you with tools (adhesive tape, etc.) for hanging your poster, it is recommended that you bring your own materials as a back up.

We will not be able to help with the printing of posters.

Format:

There will also be other authors with their poster presentations in the gallery. You will have one poster wall available for your presentation and the dimensions is 100 cm x 210 cm. For that reason, we encourage you to avoid exceeding the dimensions of a A0 (84 cm width and 120 cm high).

Type of letter, font and size:

We recommend using the following font and font size:

- Type of font: Arial
- Title: At least 36 points.
- Headings: 30 points or more.
- Text: At least 24 points.

Other recommendations:

When choosing a background to frame your visual presentation, remember that neutral or greyish colours will be easier to see than a bright colour. Space your information proportionately. A suggestion is to divide your presentation either horizontally or vertically into three or four sections, and place materials within those sections. We recommend you to use illustrations, schemas and graphics so that your presentation can be more attractive.

For any questions, please send an email to the organizers, emac2024@ase.ro.

EMAC ENGINIUS DOCTORAL COMPETITION

New generations of marketing experts are crucial to develop the theories and tools that shape the future of our field. The EMAC Enginius doctoral dissertation award recognizes and encourages this emerging talent. Three finalists will be honoured with cash prizes and will present their work during the EMAC/Enginius Doctoral Dissertation Award special session scheduled on Wednesday, 29th of May, 2024 10:30-12:00 at the EMAC 2024 Annual Conference in Aula Magna, Ground floor.

The three selected finalists are:

Maximilian Beichert, University of Mannheim | Efficient and Sustainable Influencer Marketing

Social media influencers have become increasingly prominent, playing key roles within social media platforms and attracting sizable followings. This has led advertisers to shift their focus from celebrity endorsers to lesser-known individuals who may possess persuasive power among their followers for promoting products (Leung, Gu, & Palmatier, 2022). Particularly within direct-to-consumer (DTC) firms, the use of influencers for product and service promotion has gained significant traction (Shopify, 2023). In 2023, marketers invested an enormous $17.4 billion globally in influencer marketing (collabstr, 2023). Recently, there has been a growing interest in smaller influencers, such as micro or nano influencers (e.g., Lanz et al., 2019). These influencers are not only more affordable but may also be perceived as more authentic (Leung, Gu, & Palmatier, 2022). The main literature on influencer marketing (e.g., Wies, Bleier, & Edeling, 2022; Leung et al., 2022) has investigated the relationship of influencer-follower levels with awareness and engagement metrics on social media platforms (i.e., comments, likes, and shares of user-generated content). Despite the popularity of influencer endorsements, the impact on revenue outcomes has not been studied. Hence, in this dissertation, I follow a call for further research by Hughes, Swaminathan, and Brooks (2019) to investigate the return on investment for influencer marketing. In the first part of this dissertation, I study whether to target low- or high-follower influencers to generate immediate revenue by considering sales and costs correspondingly. In the second part, I focus on the downstream consequences of influencer marketing by examining behavior outcomes on the customer level.

David Finken, ETH Zurich | Transcending Reality: A Multimethod Analysis of Consumer Preferences for Augmented Reality Displayed and Unique Digital Goods

Mixed realities are part of many people's daily lives, and consumer adoption of Augmented Reality (AR) and Virtual Reality (VR) is growing. Engaging with AR technology—the central focus of this dissertation—can create value for both consumers and firms. The primary articles of this dissertation (i.e., article 1: "The Proximity Effect" and article 2: "Buyer, Beware") reveal surprising effects of engaging with AR technology for product displays. Specifically, article 1 proposes that the real-time blending and matching of virtual and physical realities elicit proximate product perceptions—a phenomenon unique to AR. Ten experiments testing the Proximity Effect ultimately show increases in psychological ownership or preference (expressed through willingness to pay, attitudes, or liking; even days after product inspection) as consequences of proximity. We qualify the proximity account through three subsequent congruency patterns: presentational-, product-related-, and individual congruency. In consumption situations where proximity perceptions are endangered—due to less congruency—we demonstrate that the positive effects of AR are diminished. Article 2 extends the visual product display in AR by incorporating vertical differentiations of products (i.e., inferior, or superior versions). Eight studies, including an incentive-compatible laboratory experiment, demonstrate that AR displays increase preferences for products with objectively inferior performance (e.g., less processing power in a laptop) but not for products with superior performance. Both articles have direct implications for online and offline retail.

Yufei Shen | Nova School of Business and Economics - How Does Disabling Cookie Tracking Impact Online News Consumption?

Prior literature has extensively shown that restricting the collection and usage of personal data, at the cost of lowering the quality of personalized online services, can lead to undesirable effects for individuals, firms, and markets. This paper presents the positive impact of disabling cookie tracking on news consumption. Cookie tracking is one of the most prevailing data collection techniques online. Using a dataset obtained from a reputable European news website, we find that disabling cookie tracking increases the number of articles consumers read by 54.5% and the number of categories they consume by 39.1%. These effects are robust to various model specifications and alternative measures, persisting for over three months. The increased views of news articles are mainly concentrated in "hard" news categories (e.g., political, and economic news). Notably, the news website introduced the feature of personalized news recommendations on its main page during our sample period, creating an ideal empirical setting for us to isolate the variation in enhanced perceived privacy control from the variation in the content personalization quality. We find that the effects of disabling tracking are even more pronounced when content personalization is absent, suggesting that heightened perceived privacy control drives users' increased news consumption. We also show that users disabling tracking would benefit less from personalized news recommendations. Our paper provides initial empirical evidence of the positive value of disabling data tracking within the digital media ecosystem.

MARKETING STRATEGY SIG WORKSHOP: THEORIES-IN-USE

by Ajay Kohli, Kapil Tuli, and Wolfgang Ulaga

Theories-in-use (TIU) is a research approach that taps into the mental models of managers and/or any other key respondents to understand their theories of a phenomenon at hand, and what factors impact the success or failure of actions or situations related to the phenomenon (see Zaltman, Heffring, and LeMasters 1982). As a research method, TIU has a rich history spanning over three decades across management disciplines and beyond, including marketing.

TIU has been used as an approach in the marketing discipline to define not only foundational concepts such as service quality (Zeithaml, Parasuraman, and Berry 1985) and market orientation (Kohli and Jaworski 1990), but also emerging concepts such as customer solutions (Tuli, Kohli, Bharadwaj 2007), hybrid offerings (Ulaga and Reinartz 2011) and marketing doctrine (Challagalla, Murtha, and Jaworski 2014).

This session will first introduce the TIU method for developing new constructs and theories about marketing phenomena. Next, it will discuss a number of misconceptions about the method. Finally, it will offer „do’s and don’ts“ for conducting the field research, analyzing the data, developing constructs and theories, writing up papers, and getting them published in top journals. The session is planned to be interactive and will address questions participants may have about the different aspects related to the TIU method.

Tentative Structure:

1. Curtain Raisers: 10 minutes
2. Buzz Group Discussion and Questions: 20 minutes
3. Sharing of Perspectives: 30 minutes
4. Myths and Reality of TIU
5. Reflections from Field Work: Dos and Don’ts
6. Reflections from the Publication Process: Dos and Don’ts
7. Open Q&A: 30 minutes

(Voluntary) Preparation:

To ensure a smooth and productive workshop, please feel free to (anonymously) post any questions you have about the method in advance through the workshop’s online form: <https://shorturl.at/GLNPR>. All inquiries are welcome and will be addressed during the session.

A highly recommended resource is the article written by the workshop hosts: · Zeithaml, V. A., Jaworski, B. J., Kohli, A. K., Tuli, K. R., Ulaga, W., & Zaltman, G. (2020). A theories-in-use approach to building marketing theory. Journal of Marketing, 84(1), 32-51.

IJRM SPECIAL SESSION ON MARKETING AND THE CREATOR ECONOMY

Session Chair: Martin Schreier

Session Discussant: Alina Sorescu

Session Description:

Bloggers, streamers, artists, celebrities, musicians and service providers are just a few examples of creators who aim to monetize their talent by generating and posting digital content. Aided by technological platforms and AI tools, they form a complex and dynamic ecosystem of economic activity, estimated to be worth over $100 billion dollars, and growing rapidly. In this session, we explore the creator economy from a marketing perspective, addressing questions such as: How can creators optimize their content, establish their brand, build their content composition, and expand their audience? How do platforms create the right mix of creators and curate their content? What challenges and opportunities are presented for traditional firms?

After a brief introduction of the session by Alina Sorescu, we will have the following presentations:

- On the role of platforms in the creator economy. Alex Bleier (presenter), Beth Fossen and Michal Shapira
- Embracing entrepreneurship in the creator economy. Alexander Edeling (presenter) and Simone Wies
- Luxury branding and the creator economy: Emerging tensions and future avenues. Emanuela Prandelli (presenter), Yajin Wang and Henri Weijo
- Understanding mega creators: The central role of community-centricity. Reto Hofstetter (presenter) and Johanna Gollnhofer

The session will close with Q&As for the upcoming IJRM Special Issue on the Creator Economy (Submission Deadline: June 30, 2024).

EMAC DISTINGUISHED SCHOLAR AWARD 2024 LECTURE

EMAC is proud to present the EMAC Distinguished Marketing Scholar Award 2024 to Professor P. K. Kannan from the University of Maryland, College Park.

This annual award is designed to be the highest honour that a marketing educator who has had extensive connections with EMAC (The European Marketing Academy) can receive. The two main criteria for the award are:

- Outstanding marketing scholarship as reflected in extensive, impactful research contributions
- Outstanding contributions to the European Marketing Academy.

Professor P. K. Kannan will present a lecture at the plenary session on Thursday, 30th of May, 2024 from 16:00 in Amphitheatre 1 (ground floor), entitled 'Digital Wisdom: Technology's Impact on Modern Marketing'.

Digital Wisdom: Technology's Impact on Modern Marketing

P. K. Kannan | Dean's Chair in Marketing Science, Robert H. Smith School of Business, University of Maryland, College Park

I focus on the critical role that digital technology and transformation plays in modern marketing illustrating it, at times, with my own research. I trace the confluence of digital technology with the environment and marketing elements, and metrics and describe the emergent forms of such interactions. The talk will highlight the implications for research and practice, outlining specific areas where marketers and researchers need to focus while embracing technology as a fundamental aspect of marketing.

HEAD OF MARKETING FORUM

The Marketing Department Head Forum has become a tradition at EMAC. In this forum, department heads and all interested faculty discuss current topics and exchange ideas. The theme of this year's Forum is "The role of generative AI in marketing research and education".

During the Forum, we aim to discuss the following questions:

- What are the benefits and pitfalls of using generative AI for research purposes?
 - (How) can GenAI help researchers in various stages of the research process (e.g., identifying research questions, summarizing the literature, developing research stimuli (scenarios, visuals, stimuli etc.), data analysis, summarizing the findings, etc.)
 - (How) can Gen AI help reduce research bias?
- How to ensure an open discussion of such issues within and across faculty departments?
- How to educate our staff on the benefits and pitfalls of generative AI use for research and education?
- What skills are needed to use GenAI to its fullest potential?
- What are the editorial policies and views of such issues?
- What are the ethical considerations and boundary conditions for the use of generative AI in marketing research?
- How to handle the use of generative AI in teaching and education?
 - What is an acceptable level of AI use, and when it is considered plagiarism?
 - When to incentivize and facilitate its use vs. hindering it?
 - How to use GenAI for teaching purposes with integrity, transparency and honesty?
 - How can we educate the students to use GenAI in such a way?

The program is as follows:

12:30	Welcome
12:40	Renana Peres (Hebrew University Business School)
13:00	Luk Warlop (BI Norwegian Business School)
13:20	Discussion
13:45	Forum ends

Renana Peres is a professor of Marketing in the Hebrew University Business School. Her areas of research address the interplay between brands, consumer social interactions, and firm decisions. She studies the determinants of brand perception, how word of mouth and social interactions are generated on brands, and how social interactions eventually translate into sales. She explored how blockchain data marketplaces, and AI generated stimuli can help to better understand brands and brand equity. Prof. Peres has served as a Visiting Assistant Professor of Marketing at University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School, and NYU's Stern School of Business. She has published her works in the Journal of Marketing Research, Journal of Marketing, Marketing Science, International Journal of Research in Marketing, and many other reputable journals. She is a Senior Editor of the International Journal of Research in Marketing.

Luk Warlop is Professor of Marketing, Dean Research, and Dean PhD at BI Norwegian Business School. He obtained a master's degree in (organizational) psychology (1986) and an MBA (1988) at KU Leuven, and a PhD in marketing (1995) at the University of Florida. He studies individual consumer decision making and the social psychology of consumer behavior. His research has been published in J. Consumer Research, J. Marketing Research, J. Consumer Psychology, Int. J. Research in Marketing, J. Accounting Research, Management Science, J. Service Research, J. Personality and Social Psychology, Psychological Science, and several others. His work has been recognized with a best paper award (2000) and two long term impact awards (2013 and 2023) at the International Journal of Research in Marketing (IJRM), and with an IgNobel Prize. He is currently a member of the Board of the European Institute for Advanced Studies in Management, and the former president of the European Marketing Academy (2018-2021).

EMAC CLIMBER COMMUNITY

The 14th EMAC Climber Community (EMAC CC) meeting will take place during the EMAC Annual Conference 2024 in Bucharest (Romania).

The EMAC CC aims to establish a community of early career scholars in Marketing throughout Europe and other continents. Several research organizations and conferences in Europe offer a special program for PhD students and/or networking possibilities for full professors. However, the generation between beginners and successful leaders sometimes seems to be forgotten, although they represent the potential marketing professors of the future. In other words, they are the „climbers“ of the European Marketing Academy.

Marketing scholars at an early stage of their career (e.g., assistant professor, Post-Doc, research fellow, etc.) are invited to participate in the EMAC CC meeting on Wednesday afternoon during the conference.

Formal meeting

Wednesday, May 29th, 2 pm to 5.30 pm (two subsequent afternoon sessions) - room 0321

Session 1: 14.00 to 15.30

- Welcoming words by EMAC's president Tammo Bijmolt
- Keynote Speech "Designing a complete academic profile for the 2020s" followed by an open discussion by Professor Luk Warlop (<https://www.bi.edu/about-bi/employees/department-of-marketing/luk-warlop/>)

Luk Warlop is Dean of Research & PhD and Professor of Marketing at BI Norwegian Business School. He obtained a master degree in (organizational) psychology (1986) and an MBA (1988) at KU Leuven, and a PhD in marketing (1995) at the University of Florida. He studies individual consumer decision making and the social psychology of consumer behavior. His research has been published in J. Consumer Research, J. Marketing Research, J. Consumer Psychology, Int. J. Research in Marketing, J. Accounting Research, Management Science, J. Service Research, J. Personality and Social Psychology, Psychological Science, and several others. His work has been recognized with a best paper award (2000) and two long term impact awards (2013 and 2023) at the International Journal of Research in Marketing (IJRM), and with an IgNobel Prize. He is a former president of the European Marketing Academy (2018-2021), and currently a board member of the European Institute for Advanced Studies in Management (EIASM).

Session 2: 16.00 to 17.30

- Networking: The second part of the EMAC CC meeting is again fully dedicated to the development of an international research network among participating early career scholars in Marketing. The purpose of this second session is thus to get to know other EMAC CC members more closely; exchange experiences regarding research, research funding, or (inter)national job search processes; find out about potential joint research interests; and ideally establish the foundation for joint future collaborations and/or exchanges across countries.

SIG Service Marketing Special Session: "Service Marketing Priorities Towards the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals"

Jenny van Doorn (University of Groningen)
Bart Larivière (KU Leuven and Ghent University)

Presenters and Panelists

Michael Haenlein (ESCP Business School), Ming-Hui Huang (National Taiwan University, editor-in-chief Journal of Service Research)

Abstract

Today's society faces many grand challenges, such as climate change, healthcare, social, and economic crises alongside with widening inequalities with respect to gender, race, and wealth. The global community has set the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals (UNSDGs) to face those challenges. Yet unfortunately, progress on half of the 140 targets that the United Nations is able to measure has been "weak and insufficient," according to the U.N.'s latest progress report in 2023, with another 30% of the goals stalled or gone in reverse. Against this background, also the service community has to ask itself the question how to make a meaningful contribution for a better world. In many institutions, not only service research, but also educational activities are already scrutinized on their impact on the UNSDGs. Therefore, the goal of this special session is to inspire and motivate its participants to engage in such service research.

Michael Haenlein will begin this session with a research presentation highlighting the potential of transformative service. In particular, the authors explore the customer journey of vulnerable customers in end-of-life care. Jenny van Doorn will then present research priorities that were developed by and with the audience of recent online talks of the SIG Service Marketing "Service for a Circular and Sustainable Future" and "Exploring the Future of Human-Robot Interactions". The session will continue with a panel discussion consisting of Ming-Hui Huang, editor-in-chief of the Journal of Service Research, and other contributors to the session. We will discuss the potential of service research to address societal problems, the challenges in practice and highlight fruitful avenues for future research that can serve as inspiration for in particular junior scholars, in an interactive format. Jan Schumann will conclude the session with an initiative to start a COST Action (European Cooperation in Science and Technology, see <https://www.cost.eu/funding/open-call-a-simple-one-step-application-process/>) based on the SIG Service Marketing network.

SIG Business to Business Marketing Special Session: "Current Issues in B2B Relationship Management"

Chair

Kristina Schaffer (University of Graz)

Presenters and Panelists

Qiong Wang (University of Oklahoma)
Desmond Lo (Santa Clara University)
Kristina Schaffer (University of Graz)

Abstract

Issues around business-to-business marketing have been and continue to remain relevant for marketing researchers. Findings from such research allow managers to make more informed decisions. However, the changing business environment underscores the need for additional research to keep managers abreast about current developments pertinent to their businesses.

Additionally, new theoretical and methodological insights generated from such research can be valuable for motivating future research. The proposed B2B SIG session contributes to the discourse on current issues in B2B marketing by focusing on novel topics such as the increasing challenges to supply chains due to marketplace volatility, the management of knowledge work, the training of customers in B2B relationships, and theoretical developments in transaction cost economics. In line with the intended benefits to attendees of the 2024 EMAC conference, the session brings together experts from different parts of the world, promoting networking opportunities and an exchange of knowledge.

Each of the papers in this session deal with an academic issue that will be beneficial for both researchers and managers to consider. A paper by Peng, Wang, Lo, and Petersen relies on organizational information processing theory (IPT) to highlight how firms can respond to escalating challenges in their supply chains due to marketplace volatility and a lack of information from key partners. A second paper by Dessein, Lo, Shangguang, and Owan focuses on the phenomenon of knowledge work and sheds light on the time and involvement that managers and their teams spend on knowledge work projects, thereby highlighting the importance of managerial coordination in organizing knowledge workers. The final paper in the session by Schaffer and Kashyap uses a series of expert interviews with suppliers and buyers to investigate the underexplored phenomenon of customer training in B2B firms, forwarding a conceptual framework and testable propositions that are based on the grounded theory and theories-in-use approaches. Employing diverse theoretical and methodological backgrounds, the papers in the session collectively provide insights that can inspire further research and aid managerial decision making.

SIG Digital Marketing Special Session: “Quo Vadis Digital Marketing? Current and Future Developments in the Research Landscape”

Discussants

Evert de Haan (University of Groningen)

Lara Lobschat (University of Maastricht)

Presenters and Panelists

Arvind Rangaswamy (Penn State University)

Koen Pauwels (Northeastern University)

Hanness Datta (Tilburg University)

Abstract

In the past decade, digital marketing has quickly evolved, with new research topics and digital marketing phenomena coming and going. Research topics like social media, online advertising, mobile devices, and online word of mouth have remained popular, while topics related to online privacy, unstructured data, and artificial intelligence have increased in relevance. Other topics, like NFT's, crypto currency, and the Metaverse, have seen a boost in popularity, but are considered a hype by some scholars and practitioners.

In this session, a panel will focus on the trends and hypes in research and practice when it comes to topics in digital marketing. We will first present the results of a new thematic exploration of digital marketing research in key marketing journals (e.g., JM, JMR, MS, JCR, JAMS, IJRM, JNM), which highlight the trends and hypes within the field. Next, we relate this to previous thematic explorations in our field (Lamberton and Stephen 2016). Based on this, a research agenda will be presented and a discussion will follow on how to distinguish between trends and hypes, how to detect the up and coming topics and phenomena, and how this influences the chances of getting an impactful publication.

SIG Innovation and Stakeholders Special Session: “Service innovation in complex contexts”

Chairs

Paul H. Driessen (Radboud University)

Bas Hillebrand (Radboud University)

Annouk Lievens (University of Antwerp)

Panelists

Tohid Ghanbarpour (Kristiania University College)

Elina Jaakkola (University of Turku)

Lisa Martinez Sanchez (University of Antwerp)

Moderated by: Paul H. Driessen (Radboud University)

Abstract

With our economies becoming more and more characterized by services rather than physical products, service innovation is growing in relevance. Especially for service innovations, not only a good understanding and involvement of the customer is important, but the whole stakeholder network (or ecosystem) needs to be taken into account. This is true because service innovations require the support of multiple stakeholder groups (such as co-suppliers, governmental organizations, and NGOs) and because services are frequently used in combination with other services (so-called service constellations). Hence, service innovation cannot be separated from managing stakeholder networks, making service innovation even more complex than it already is. This session aims to address the complexity inherent to stakeholder relationships in service innovation contexts. In the first of three short presentations, Tohid Ghanbarpour will discuss the role of innovation in the service environment to manage stakeholder relationships, with special attention to the differences with product innovation. Second, Elina Jaakkola will talk about understanding and leveraging actor experiences for service innovation. She will augment the current perspective on customer experiences and discuss research implications. Third, Lisa Martinez Sanchez and Annouk Lievens will share research findings about the orchestration and development of multi-stakeholder networks for sustainable healthcare service innovation. They have conducted a longitudinal exploratory case study on the Green Deal Sustainable Care of the Flemish Government. This SIG session will end with a panel discussion (approximately 30 min.) where renowned researchers reflect on each other's ideas about stakeholder relationships in service innovation contexts and take questions from the audience.

SIG Quantitative Marketing Special Session: "Quantitative Marketing Research - Hot Topics and Recent Developments"

Chairs

Bart Bronnenberg (Tilburg University, The Netherlands)
Dominik Papies (University of Tübingen, Germany)

Presenters

Sebastian Gabel (Erasmus University Rotterdam)
Shrabastee Banerjee (Tilburg University)
Dennis Fok (Erasmus University Rotterdam)

Abstract

Machine Learning and AI have dominated headlines over the past year, notably triggered by the advent and rapid adoption of ChatGPT. While much public and media attention has centered on the implications of Generative AI for business, for the economy, and for society as a whole, comparatively little has been discussed regarding its potential to propel scientific advancement. This session aims to bridge this gap by exploring how these innovative technologies equip marketing researchers with unprecedented tools for researching novel questions across three distinct areas.

The first talk "Towards Foundation Models in Retailing" by Sebastian Gabel will focus on foundation models (FM), which mark a transformative leap in computational science, leveraging sophisticated neural network architectures like generative adversarial networks, transformers, and variational encoders to redefine data analysis. The second talk "Text-as-data in Marketing Research: Recent Developments" by Shrabastee Banerjee will give an overview of text mining tools and how they are used by marketing researchers. The third talk "Learning from developments in AI on text, image, and video for "traditional marketing data" by Dennis Fok departs from the observation that many current developments in AI deal with text, image or video, and it will focus on what these developments can bring to researchers who are not using text, images or video.

SIG IJRM/ Consumer Behavior Special Session: "Consumer + Technology Dialogue: A Conversation on How Technology affects Consumers and Society"

Chair:

Ana Valenzuela (ESADE- Ramon Llul & Baruch College)

Presenters

Christoph Fuchs (University of Vienna)
Jonas Goergen (St. Gallen University)

Martin Schreier (WU Vienna)
 Anne-Kathrin Klesse (RSM, Erasmus University)
 Shwetha Mariadassou (RSM, Erasmus University)

Abstract

This session will bring together marketing researchers from several European institutions interested in studying technology-related issues. The line-up of presentations should work as a starting point for a conversation about the current state of the topic. This session would be particularly interesting for faculty studying technology-related topics in the context of marketing and consumer behavior; questions span issues such as automation, robots, generative AI, algorithmic recommender systems, augmented and virtual reality, among others.

It will be organized into three groups of flash talks:

Technology instead of consumers: Christoph Fuchs, University of Vienna, Jonas Goergen, St. Gallen University

Consumers with technology: Martin Schreier, WU Vienna, Anne-Kathrin Klesse, RSM, Erasmus University

Technology as a medium: Shwetha Mariadassou, RSM, Erasmus University, Ana Valenzuela, ESADE- Ramon Llul & Baruch College

IJRM (The International Journal of Research in Marketing), positioned at the forefront of innovation within the marketing field, sponsors this session. The Editor-in-chief, Martin Schreier, will provide an introduction about how this field of research fits well the concept of novel and potentially disruptive research championed by the journal.

SIG Pricing Special Session: “Recent developments in pricing research and promising avenues for future work”

Chairs

Gilles Laurent (ESSEC Business School)

Arnaud Monnier (Nova School of Business and Economics)

Panelists

Ioannis Evangelidis (Esade, Ramon Lull University)

Manissa Gunadi (EADA Business School Barcelona)

Minah Jung (Stern School of Business, New York University)

Vicki Morwitz (Columbia Business School)

Priya Raghubir (Stern School of Business, New York University)

Marc Vanhuele (HEC Paris)

Abstract

The goal of this session is to discuss recent advances in pricing research and promising areas that deserve academic attention, with a special emphasis on behavioral pricing. A non-exhaustive list of questions to be debated in this session are: What areas are under-researched in behavioral pricing? How can marketing research provide insights on consumer responses to new modes of payments? How can we diversify data sources and methodologies to better understand the psychology of price? How do recent trends in pricing affect consumer welfare?

The SIG on pricing is newly created and this is its first Special Session at an EMAC conference. An important secondary goal of this session is that scholars interested in building a community around the topic of pricing can discuss possible SIG actions to generate stimulating and fruitful exchanges in the future.

SIG CRM Special Session: “CRM Research in Services”

Chairs:

Manfred Krafft (University of Münster)

Javier Sese (University of Zaragoza)

Presenters

Barak Libai (Arison School of Business at Reichman University)

Michael Brady (Florida State University)

The session will include two keynote talks:

Barak Libai: New Product Growth in the Era of “Everything as a Service”

Abstract

Broadly speaking, much of the research on new product growth has become less relevant to modern markets. Historically, this research centered on first-purchase models tailored for durable goods, where adoption served as a strong proxy for profits. However, the rise of recurring consumption business models—often termed XaaS, or “everything as a service”—now characterizes many new product sectors. Within the XaaS framework, adoption merely signifies the beginning of the growth of a user base and a continuously evolving revenue stream. Managers, investors, and analysts who focus on the evolution of revenues and profit over time require an innovative lifecycle view. We propose that understanding XaaS growth demands an examination of a three-tiered sequence: Adopters, Users, and Money. We offer insights into the trajectory of these tiers, their interconnections, and implications for customer management and valuation.

Michael Brady: On the Intersection of CRM and OFR

Abstract

Some of the most interesting research ideas, growing literatures, and thriving research areas come from work at the intersection of two robust research streams. One such intersection that is ripe for future research exists between the CRM and Organizational Frontline Research (OFR) literatures. Whereas the CRM stream is well established, OFR was born in 2017 out of a frontline service movement that started in a special issue of JSR and now features its own SIG, an annual conference, and three follow-up special issues published in some of the discipline’s top journals. OFR’s position at the intersection of interactions and interfaces at the organizational boundary lends itself well to theory and content drawn from the CRM literature. Likewise, CRM’s data-driven focus on long-term, mutually satisfying relationships fits well with OFR’s multi-disciplinary, point-of-contact perspective. The purpose of this keynote is to explore the CRM-OFR intersection, with an emphasis on common ground, shared understanding, and future research opportunities.

SIG Marketing Strategy Special Session: “Responsible Use of Artificial Intelligence in Marketing”

Chair and Keynote Speaker

Herbert Endres (Chemnitz University of Technology)

Abstract

The Marketing Strategy SIG on “Responsible Use of Artificial Intelligence in Marketing” at the EMAC 2024 aims to delve into the ethical, practical, and strategic dimensions of leveraging artificial intelligence (AI) within the marketing domain. As AI technologies continue to evolve at a rapid pace, their application in marketing strategies, customer engagement, and market analysis has become increasingly prevalent, offering unprecedented opportunities for personalized marketing, predictive analytics, and customer experience enhancement. However, this proliferation also raises significant concerns regarding consumer privacy, data security, algorithmic bias, and the broader societal implications of automated decision-making.

This session will convene leading experts, practitioners, and scholars to explore the multifaceted challenges and opportunities presented by AI in marketing. Key topics will include the ethical considerations of AI-driven marketing practices, the development of transparent and accountable AI systems, the impact of AI on consumer behavior and trust, and the regulatory landscape governing the use of AI in marketing. Through a combination of keynote presentations, discussions, and interactive workshops, participants will engage in critical discourse on best practices for responsible AI implementation in marketing, aiming to foster innovation while ensuring ethical integrity and respect for consumer rights.

The ultimate goal of this session is to outline a roadmap for the ethical integration of AI in marketing strategies, ensuring that these technologies are used in a manner that benefits both businesses and consumers, without compromising ethical standards or societal values. Participants will leave with a deeper understanding of the complex interplay between AI and marketing, equipped with actionable insights and frameworks to guide responsible AI usage in their marketing initiatives.

All EMAC 2024 attendees are invited to participate in this session.

SIG Retailing Special Session I

Lien Lamey (KU Leuven)

Jonne Guyt (University of Amsterdam)

Katrijn Gielens (University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill)

Abstract

The retailing landscape is changing. The emergence of online shopping has metaphorically left physical retailers high and dry. Yet, many retailers are investigating physical stores as an important aspect of their physical presence and multi-channel strategy. Hence, physical stores are not dead; but they are changing or need to change. The special issue of the Journal of Retailing, "Re-Imagining the Physical Store" (volume 99, issue 4), offers insights and guidelines for retailers on five strategic levers that retailers can utilize to re-imagine their physical stores: curation, social, experience, frictionless, and fulfillment. The Special Interest Group (SIG) Retailing organizes two sessions discussing research on these strategic levers. The first session covers three papers focusing on how physical retailers can offer curation, include social elements, and provide an excellent experience. The second session focuses on research showing how retailers can implement frictionless and fulfillment levers to re-imagining physical stores.

Palace of Parliament Tour - Have a chance to see the Palace of Parliament, often referred to as 'The People's House'. The building stands as a symbol of Communist megalomania fused with Neoclassical architecture. Second in size only to the Pentagon, this colossal administrative building, begun in 1984 and still incomplete, spans a staggering 330,000 square metres and boasts over 3,000 rooms. Views on this structure vary from a testament to Romanian builders' skill to an architectural monstrosity. Yet, it undeniably holds a prominent place in Bucharest's skyline. With three Guinness World Records to its name, it reigns as the world's largest and costliest civic administration building, stretching 270 metres in length, 245 metres in width, and rising 86 metres in height.
